A common misconception in the grant writing process is that the actual proposal is a major component of the grant seeking process. However, to be successful, grant writing is a process that entails careful planning, research and outreach as well as cultivating relationships.

Finding Funding & Establishing Your "Need" will address how to research grants, develop partnership & build relationships with funders and developing the specific need your project will address.

Grant Proposal Basics will address the components of an effective proposal, evaluation strategies & how grant proposals are reviewed.

The workshops are recommended for staff, volunteers and board members of community nonprofits, local governments and other community organizations.
